

Kalpa Chandarana and Krishon Chandarana have repeatedly demonstrated a pattern of invasive behavior, particularly in snooping into my father's personal and financial affairs. Their actions were not only intrusive but also highly inappropriate, especially considering that my father had already distributed certain assets during his lifetime.

Habit of Snooping and Intrusion:

There is clear evidence of their persistent interference. I have screenshots of emails they sent me, in which they shared mail shots of earlier wills created by my father—wills they had no business accessing. These emails reveal their ongoing attempts to pry into my father's personal and financial matters, even after many of those issues had been settled. Their snooping extended beyond simple curiosity; it was part of a larger effort to undermine the rightful distribution of my father's assets and interfere in his private business dealings.

Creation of the Suspicious Will:

Their interference goes even further. I possess a recording of the court proceedings related to the estate matter, where my lawyer questioned the legitimacy of the suspicious will that was created while my father was hospitalized. During the proceedings, the lawyer who drafted the will admitted—more than four times—that the details of my father's assets were provided by Kalpa and Krishon, particularly through my father's son-in-law. This is a crucial admission, as it directly links Kalpa and Krishon to the creation of this questionable document.

Further, there is documentary evidence that Kalpa and Krishon hired the services of Harpreet Ubhi, the lawyer responsible for drafting the will in the hospital. This raises serious ethical and legal concerns about their motives and the circumstances under which this will was created. Given that my father was in a vulnerable state at the time, the fact that Kalpa and Krishon were the ones orchestrating the drafting of a new will casts significant doubt on its authenticity and validity.

Strong Argument Against Their Actions:

The involvement of Kalpa and Krishon in the creation of this suspicious will is not just a matter of inappropriate interference—it is a direct attempt to manipulate the distribution of my father's estate. Their actions are unethical and likely illegal. By hiring a lawyer to draft a will while my father was hospitalized, and by providing detailed asset information themselves, they actively sought to influence the outcome of the estate in their favor. This behavior is not only a violation of my father's wishes but also a blatant attempt to override the legitimate distribution of his assets.

Moreover, their continued snooping into my father's personal affairs and distributing sensitive information regarding earlier wills and settled assets further demonstrates their disregard for privacy and proper legal procedures. They have continuously acted with ulterior motives, seeking to benefit themselves at the expense of other family members and, most importantly, in direct contradiction to my father's intentions.

Conclusion:

Kalpa and Krishon's actions represent a clear breach of trust and respect for my father's wishes. Their involvement in the creation of the hospital will, their persistent snooping into private family matters, and their blatant attempts to manipulate the distribution of assets all point to a coordinated effort to interfere with the estate. This level of deceit should not go unnoticed, and their actions should be thoroughly scrutinized in court. The evidence—both the email screenshots and the court recording—strongly supports the argument that Kalpa and Krishon's involvement was inappropriate, unethical, and potentially unlawful.
